

STRATEGIC ORIENTATION is the ability to link the long-range vision of Aboriginal self-determination to daily work, ranging from a simple understanding to a sophisticated awareness of the full impact of thinking and actions. It is the ability to think and operate broadly, with the goal of sustainability, to further the goals of Aboriginal people in a way that meets the collective public interest. This also means taking responsibility to collaboratively design and implement steps to redress past harms and set frameworks in place to prevent their recurrence.

BEFORE AND DURING THE INTERVIEW

- Review both “ready” and “not ready” behaviours. See the Aboriginal Relations Behavioural Competency dictionary for the entire list. Select behaviours critical to success. The candidate may demonstrate other valid “ready” and/or “not ready” behaviours not listed.
- Avoid listening only for key words. Listen to the full story, depth, and quality of the example, and consider everything you hear, see, and notice during the interview.

AFTER THE INTERVIEW

- Did they demonstrate openness and curiosity when providing examples?
- Did the candidate show their understanding and competence at the required readiness level?
- If the candidate does not have direct experience working with Aboriginal people, are the thinking, attitude, and behaviours demonstrated translatable to working effectively with Aboriginal people? Imagine the candidate actually carrying out the duties of the position and interacting with (and/or supporting) Aboriginal people, communities, governments and organizations. When you listen to what the candidate is telling you, does it give you confidence the candidate will work with the respect needed to be ready?
- Use the Interpretive Wheel to evaluate the response and assign a numerical score.

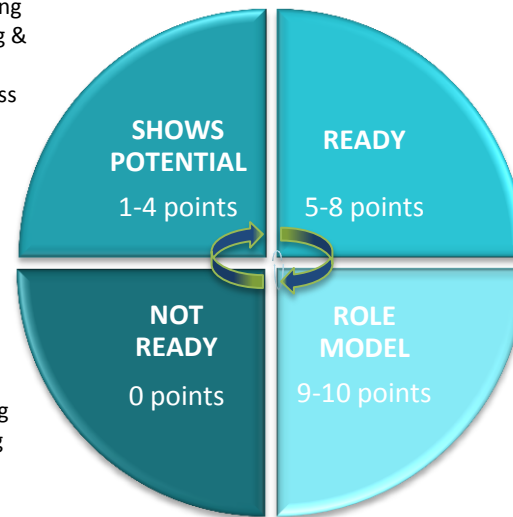

DID the candidate demonstrate...?

Some examples of READY thinking, approach, and behaviours	Some examples of NOT READY thinking, approach, and behaviours
Understands how the goal of Aboriginal self-determination influences the work	Exhibits little or no understanding of how the goal of Aboriginal self-determination drives the work
Initiates deep Aboriginal engagement in a collaborative and culturally respectful way to determine long-term issues, opportunities, and direction	Is in a hurry to act on a "good enough" solution without considering the impact over the long term
Learns how success looks for Aboriginal people and derives motivation from that understanding	Prioritizes goals of the public service without considering Aboriginal self-determination goals
Considers Aboriginal interests and issues in the greater context of all citizens and all communities	Makes strategic decisions without full engagement of Aboriginal people
Seeks new ways to include and integrate Aboriginal interests into a larger context	Dismisses old knowledge and uses only current information
Looks for and leverages links and commonalities between the goals of the public service and those of Aboriginal people	Designs strategies based on current political climate that may not be sustainable
