A COMMUNITY LITERACY PLAN FOR CHILLIWACK

September 2006
Revised June 2007

Foreword to the December 2007 Edition of A Community Literacy Plan for Chilliwack

History: A Community Literacy Plan for Chilliwack

Over the course of the past three years, partner groups throughout the city of Chilliwack have been working to develop a community literacy plan. Representing the various literacy partners and stakeholders, members of the Steering Committee have provided input and feedback, and have participated in designing the planning process. The Steering Committee members belong to various Partner Groups throughout our city. Early in the process, an inventory of assets and needs was gathered from these larger groups and their members provided valuable input into the development of the strategic plan.

In June of 2007, A Community Literacy Plan for Chilliwack was presented to the larger population. At that time, citizens were invited to join the various Task Groups charged with actuating the activities outlined in the plan. Over the summer and into the fall, many of the strategies moved into the implementation phase and training for the first wave of volunteers took place.

The involvement of the Chilliwack School District has been and continues to be integral to the discussions and actions related to the Community Literacy Plan: trustees and senior administrators serve on the Steering Committee; focus groups include teachers and principals; parents and staffs are contributing to implementations. In several locations, there is a seamless melding of school- and community-based strategies.

Connecting A Community Literacy Plan for Chilliwack with the District Literacy Plan mandate

This fall, groups of educators around our school district began studying this Community Literacy Plan and analyzing their school-based work in light of the Five Strategic Areas (see p. 3) of the plan. The result is two-fold: (1) an inventory of the school-based assets that support each strategic area, and (2) a recommendation for a sixth Strategic Area involving people of Aboriginal heritage. The inventory and recommendation take the form of Appendix D in this edition of A Community Literacy Plan for Chilliwack. We have not, then, developed a separate District Literacy Plan. Rather, our intention is to gradually search for ways to apply the assets of the school district to the strategies that form the framework of A Community Literacy Plan for Chilliwack. As the work of the Steering Committee continues, we will look for ways to apply the assets of the community to the work of literacy development happening in schools, as well.

Connecting A Community Literacy Plan for Chilliwack and the District Achievement Contract

An examination of the two documents, A Community Literacy Plan for Chilliwack and the District Achievement Contract, reveals an obvious commonality: the concern for marginalized, under-supported citizens. At the school, district, and community levels, various partners are developing networks for and with people who are struggling. For the next few years, much of the work embedded in the District Achievement Contract involves gathering information about at-risk students, the programs and strategies that are effective in meeting their learning needs, and the networks that best support them. The Community Literacy Plan focuses on reaching out to at-risk citizens of all ages, providing programs and strategies that are effective in meeting their learning needs, and creating networks that best support them. The two documents, then, are complementary. Where strategies from the Achievement Contract are directly mentioned in Appendix D, they are followed by (AC). Strategies brought forward from the Literacy Innovation Grant are marked (LIG).

Next Steps:

In February of 2008, the Steering Committee will hold a Literacy Forum inclusive of educators and community partners. At that time we will continue the work of melding the body of A Community Literacy Plan for Chilliwack with the information and recommendation recorded in Appendix D. The resulting document will then be resubmitted to the Ministry of Education by July 15, 2008.

SUMMARY

The Literacy Now Process

The Chilliwack Learning Community Initiative steering committee members are all members of the Fraser Valley East Literacy Association. This task group appointed two members as co-chairs. The Steering Committee met monthly and adopted the consensus-based decision-making model for their meetings. They adopted their guiding principle as their vision statement: To promote lifelong learning and social inclusion through which environmentally sustainable community economic development is achieved. 'Literacy' was defined as 'learning', directing our focus to places and programs where learning is central to their purpose.

With a strong emphasis on inclusion, all members provided input, feedback and participated in the decision making during the planning process.

Numerous meetings and workshops had already been organized and held, organized by the Chilliwack Learning Community Initiative, in the Chilliwack community. These focused on identifying and mobilizing local area assets as well as elevating community literacy awareness. For the launch meeting of the Literacy Now initiative, all efforts were made to invite and achieve even representation from all five key sectors of the community: civic, economic, education, public, voluntary.

All task group members (the Steering Committee) are also members of the larger Chilliwack Learning Community Initiative (CLCI), a sub-committee of the Fraser Valley East Literacy Association. The CLCI was created to provide the opportunity for strategic partnering of varying community sectors, working groups and networks, to prevent duplication of effort toward similar goals and to work in a coordinated way to achieve those goals. The CLCI continues to invite all who are interested to participate at any time. All reports, notes and minutes from meetings were circulated to those who attended or those who had asked to be kept informed of our progress.

How the working group members were involved.

How were the principles of collaboration, universal access, respect and open communication developed and maintained?

The Steering Committee members provided input, feedback and participated in the decision making of the planning process, using the consensus-based decision-making model. This gave all members an opportunity for discussion with agreement as the ultimate goal. Monthly meetings were scheduled at times and dates that were agreeable to most of the members. Task Group members were a rich source of program and contact information during preparation of the inventory.

A facilitator was brought in to help identify and prioritize areas of need. Priorities were established and committee members worked in small groups to form strategies in these areas. Using this information, the co-chairs collaborated to set out objectives and successes for identified priorities. It was decided to set out strategies using the Logic Model, as this provides a framework for measuring outcomes and is increasingly used by government and non-government organizations.

The Plan

The steering committee identified five strategies in their action plan with success statements for each area of focus. These include:

- 1) To have appropriate services and programs in place that reach out to isolated, marginalized individuals and families who are not currently accessing literacy services and programs.
- 2) To collaborate with local Early Years Committee to develop a long-term sustainability plan for the neighborhood-based system of high quality family development programs for children in the Early Years and their families. To Promote local support to increase program sustainability.
- 3) To locate and support isolated parents with young children at risk of not being reading-ready for Kindergarten and isolated and unregistered child care providers to gain awareness, skills and tools to foster pre-literacy and emerging literacy development in young children in their care.
- 4) To facilitate the development of a strategic community plan for At-risk youth (ages 7–18).
- 5) To develop a strategy with business and employment stakeholders that integrates or creates literacy & essential skills training into the workplace.

Success statements for each strategy are included in the logic model as Outcomes. Please see section 4 for Outcomes.

PLEASE NOTE: A Social Services Index specific to the Chilliwack area (sponsored by the Social Issues Committee of the City of Chilliwack) will soon be available on-line.

Summary – Community Profile

The City of Chilliwack with a population of approximately 70,000 is located at the eastern end of the Fraser Valley, along Highway 1 and is about 100 kilometers east of Vancouver, BC. It boasts a rural setting, family-oriented neighborhoods and a vibrant urban core. (1) Chilliwack and its outlying regions encompass 1.8% of BC's population. When compared with BC averages, there are two percent more seniors and six percent fewer adults between the ages of 25 and 64 in this region. There are more children living on income assistance, more single parent families, more teen pregnancies, more children in care than the provincial average and the infant mortality rate is higher than the provincial average. (2)

Chilliwack has an extremely low percentage of visible minorities and a higher than average Aboriginal population. The twelve reserves in this region include Sto:lo First Nations, Aitchelitz, Cheam, Kwaw Kwaw Apilt, Popkum, Skowkale, Shxwha:y Village, Soowahlie, Squiala, Tzeachten, Yakweakwioose, Skwah. (3)

Family earnings in all categories are lower than provincial averages and there are fewer employed residents and more dependent on government transfer income. There are more children, youth, single parents, those deemed employable, and single parent families living on income assistance in Chilliwack than what is average for BC. However, fewer seniors rely on government income supplements than in the rest of BC.

Unemployment rates are slightly higher than BC averages, especially in the 19-24 range. Chilliwack has a greater demand for lesser skilled workers (6% above BC average) with fewer management (2%) and professional occupations (6%). From those over 20 years old, 8% more lack post secondary qualifications and there are 9% fewer persons with university degrees. Graduating from high school appears to be problematic now and in the past. There are fewer graduates in Chilliwack than the provincial average and a larger percentage of students are below standard in grade 7 reading.

Although the crime rate for serious crimes (2001-03/ 1998-00) has decreased provincially, the rate in Chilliwack has increased. Property crime has increased but the crime rate for violent crimes is below provincial averages. Serious drug crime rates for juveniles (12 to 17 years of age) are 23% above provincial averages. There are more serious drug crime offences in Chilliwack than the provincial average. Alcohol sales are below provincial averages except for beer and cider which are above the provincial average.

SUMMARY OF OUR COMMUNITY LITERACY INVENTORY

The Chilliwack community is well served through many supportive agencies. We used the concept of 'learning' (not education) in preparing the asset inventory and looked for areas and programs that provided learning opportunities at all stages of life. However, we did not include programs offered in the Chilliwack Community Leisure Guide. We have therefore excluded all parks and recreational programming along with arts and music enhancement programs. Not all relevant programming was identified due to time constraints, budget constraints and lack of support for the breadth of this project from some program heads.

Vision Statement: To promote life-long learning and social inclusion through which environmentally sustainable economic development is achieved.

Learning: defined in its broadest sense.

Prenatal, Perinatal, up to Kindergarten Parents with children in their early years 0-5

Public Health Nursing through the Chilliwack Health Unit provides many programs to help the very young receive the very best from their caregivers. Some of the programs offered include Buddy-up breast-feeding opportunities, child health clinics, young prenatal care, baby time drop-ins and young postpartum groups.

Ann Davis Transition Society offers help for families, children who witness abuse, parenting workshops, outreach to homes and supervised access visits.

Under Chilliwack Community Services' family resource program umbrella are such programs as prenatal nutrition, Childcare Resource and Referral, parenting groups and two four-component family literacy programs. Literacy is woven into all family resource programs. Chilliwack Community Services has six family resource program sites in neighbourhoods that serve families with children aged birth to age 6. Family resource programs promote family development, with positive child development an overarching goal. Family resource programs support attachment of child to parent, parents to other parents and families to community.

There are numerous daycares and preschools (some with after-school care). The Make Children First Initiative provides government funding, administered through a community Early Years table to build community capacity to support families with children in the early years. The Early Years table is a subcommittee of the Chilliwack Child and Youth Committee. Another subcommittee, the Interagency Parenting Committee publishes a service directory specific to the early years.

The Fraser Valley Regional Library sponsors a summer reading program, weekly story times for young children and seasonal special programming.

The Sto:lo provide an emergency day care service for people on reserve.

Assets & Opportunities

Assets & Opportunities that support learning and development from prenatal to Kindergarten are listed on the Assets & Opportunities Chart (page 16).

Challenges and gaps that inhibit early childhood development from occurring include but are not limited to the following:

- addictions
- cultural and language barriers
- encourage use of licensed daycare facilities
- financial barriers
- inequitable distribution of childcare and development programs
- inflexible program scheduling (children's as well as parenting groups)
- lack of Provincial government contract funds for ECD programs
- lack of service coordination
- limited parental knowledge about early childhood development
- need for early detection of children's learning difficulties with support and help for families and a clearly defined avenue for help
- outreach to families
- program awareness
- provide childcare for parents participating in parenting groups
- transportation (to and from daycare; bus passes)
- ways to encourage full family participation and minority group participation in current programming

Goals:

- To find ways to reach out to those parents who would normally not attend scheduled programming, help them to feel comfortable in these groups and to inspire them as mentors in their child's development.
- To reach out to vulnerable isolated children in the early years need and to help them become school ready.
- To ensuring the sustainability of the existing but fragile neighbourhood-based system of high quality family development programming for children in the Early Years and their families.

School-age children K-grade 7

Middle Years 5-11

Many of the programs outlined in the previous section also apply to this age group. Along with those programs is a Read to Me program sponsored by the Kiwanis and Fraser Valley Regional Library.

For this age group Chilliwack has a (for fee) Therapeutic language tutor who specializes in helping children with learning problems (autism, Asperger's syndrome).

School District No. 33 serves approximately 12,000 students from Kindergarten to grade 12 and for this age group provides distance delivered education programming.

Chilliwack Community Services provides many programs which include: Families First, adult family therapy, family support worker, Sexual Assault Intervention, Nurturing Fathers, Rapid Response.

Ann Davis Transition Society provides parenting workshops, youth mentor – adolescents' counselor, family voices, caught in the middle.

Chilliwack Restorative Action & Youth Advocacy Association serves clients in conflict from ages 7-77. They take referrals from RCMP, schools and the community.

Victim Services counsel and outreach to victims of crime.

Some community schools provide after-school care and programming for students that may include: soccer, kinderdance, karate, piano lessons, dating dreams, babysitter training, and Nights Alive.

The Shxw̓ha;y Village First Nations Community provides a drop-in homework club for students from their village. Here students of all ages receive help with their school work and interact with others in a learning-centered environment.

Assets & Opportunities (5-11)

Assets and opportunities that support learning and development during childhood and early adolescence are listed on the Assets & Opportunities Chart (page 16).

Challenges & Gaps

Challenges and gaps that inhibit learning and development from occurring during childhood and early adolescence include but are not limited to the following:

- cultural and language barriers
- lack of affordable, licensed, quality out-of-school care
- lack of before and after school programming in all areas
- lack of support for border-line learners and those struggling with school curriculum
- lack of programs and services targeting this age group
- limited parental knowledge of the importance of these years
- limited special-needs spaces and learning-assistance help
- limited transitional supports
- need to develop ways busy care-givers can help children at home with their school work
- need to establish open communication between school and parents
- need to find ways to embrace parents who are not literate or have had problems with the school system themselves so they can support their children's learning and literacy development.
- to make programs available and affordable to all children

Goals:

- To reach out to isolated, marginalized individuals who are not currently accessing literacy services and programs

Grades 8 – 12 Youth ages 12-18

Many of the programs outlined in the previous section also apply to this age group.

School District No. 33 serves approximately 12,000 students from Kindergarten to grade 12 and also provides three alternate programs: distance delivered education programming; Chance Alternate (12-16 year olds); Education Center (provides self-paced school curriculum with unconventional hours to 15-40 year olds); Adult upgrading (provides individual secondary school courses for adults who wish to complete, upgrade or enhance their education).

Chilliwack Community Services (CCS) offers many outreach programs for troubled youth along with a drop-in recreation program for youth (12-16) who would not normally access regular recreational programs with activities planned for after-school and some weekends (Community Development Initiative). CCS is also involved in a LYFE (Leaving youth forever enriched) program – now in progress – this is a special program financed by Chilliwack businesses where 12 at-risk youth were selected and taught life-skills and work experience; five are going to Sri Lanka to help with relief efforts. CCS employs a school-based worker who works in three schools with students at-risk of dropping out. A suicide prevention worker provides short-term counseling for referred youth experiencing suicidal thoughts and trains students and community members in suicide risk-assessment and how to get help. Youth and family counseling – psycho-therapeutic counseling is provided for identified youth. Reconnect provides outreach to youth disconnected from society/family. They also provide hot lunches and clothing exchange. Youth Development works with youth individually and in groups teaching basic life skills, boundaries, anger management and others.

Public Health Nursing provides public health clinics, STD clinics, young prenatal care, etc.

One church identified an outreach youth group.

Fraser Valley Regional Library holds information sessions, some of which are of interest to youth.

There are three separate organizations offering computer training for the general public. Computer access and training is offered at the FVRL (CAP – Community Access Project). Fraser Valley Community Information Society provides low-cost internet access, teaches word processing, computer and internet skills and prepares websites for community groups and outreaches to set up internet access in homes. Chillnet is a network of 12 publicly assessable computer labs where they teach basic computer and internet skills.

Career Tracks are case managers providing employment services for youth 15-30 years old who are not working full time and to those not going to school full-time. Chilliwack Employment Services are also case managers providing testing and programs for unemployed and underemployed. Chilliwack Employment Resource Centre is for Chilliwack residents not working or working less than 20 hrs. per week – provide internet access, photocopying, long distance telephone calling, resume services. Food Save Consulting provides training in food safe, First Aid, WHMIS training.

Ann Davis Transition House serves women 17 & older and their children leaving abusive relationships. They offer an emergency drop-in shelter, crisis management, anger management, programming for teens questioning their sexuality, assertiveness training, parenting workshops, support for youth whose parents are separating/divorced and others.

There are (for fee) counseling services available.

Some community schools offer evening programming for youth, i.e. dance, babysitter training, foodsafe.

Assets & Opportunities

Assets and opportunities that support learning and development for youth aged 12 – 18 are listed on the Assets & Opportunities Chart (page 16).

Challenges & Gaps

Challenges and gaps that inhibit learning and development from occurring during the teen years include but are not limited to the following:

- addictions
- bus passes for students attending alternative schools
- cultural and language barriers
- gang association
- home-work clubs
- lack of support for border-line learners and those struggling with school curriculum
- life skills mentors, tutors
- limited crisis intervention
- limited transitional supports
- need more emphasis placed on life long learning
- need more public health education in schools
- out-of-school care programming/supervision
- transportation to support after-school programming
- volunteer opportunities and/or system to connect youth with opportunities

Goals:

- To facilitate the development of a strategic community plan for At-risk youth.

YOUNG ADULTS

School District No. 33: Education Centre provides self-paced school curriculum to 15-40 year olds from 8:30 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. and also Adult Upgrading – individual secondary school courses for adults who wish to complete, upgrade or enhance their education.

Chilliwack Community Services provides English Language Services for Adults (ELSA), immigrant services and Settlement services.

Employment services are provided by three separate organizations for the unemployed and under employed. These services vary from resume writing, computer use and training and skill development.

Free computer training is offered by three separate groups at various locations throughout the community (CAP at FVRL, Chillnet, Fraser Valley Community Information Society).

Public Health Nursing offers help with breast-feeding clinics and areas involving newborns and their caregivers.

Support, therapy, anger management, assertiveness training and advocacy for women, supervised access visits, parenting workshops are all offered through the Ann Davis Society. Support and information for youth questioning sexuality is also offered.

The Sto:lo provide an alternate school – information unavailable at this time.

Sto:lo Nation and other communities within the Sto:lo provide funding to post-secondary students and for those attending college entrance preparation classes.

Some community schools offer continuing education courses: (sewing, stained glass, karate), drop-in gym times, adult basic education, basic computer skills for members of their communities.

The University College of the Fraser Valley (UCFV) is a fully accredited, public post-secondary institution and operates campuses in Chilliwack and Abbotsford with regional centres in Hope, Agassiz, and Mission. It offers 12 bachelor's degrees, one applied master's degree and many one-year certificate programs and two-year diploma programs in applied and academic areas including Trades. UCFV also offers continuing studies and academic upgrading to adults of all ages. Youth who have been out of the K-12 system for a minimum of 2 years are eligible to attend UCFV. UCFV also provides an Adult Learning Centre at the Central Gateway for Families Project located at Central elementary school. UCFV trains and supports volunteer literacy tutors to work either one-on-one with adults in need of literacy supports or in the on- and off-campus Adult Learning Centres.

Assets & Opportunities

Assets and opportunities that support learning and development during young adulthood are listed on the Assets & Opportunities Chart (page 16).

Challenges & Gaps

Challenges and gaps that inhibit learning and development from occurring during the young adult years include but are not limited to the following:

- addictions
- affordable, safe housing
- cultural and language barriers
- detox centers
- free childcare for parents attending family programming and school classes
- follow-up support for parents attending family programming
- gang or sub-culture association
- lack of:
 - awareness about conflict resolution availability
 - parenting support
 - programming for at-risk young adults
 - reading clubs
 - time
 - social programming/activities
 - support groups
- life skills coaching, mentoring tutoring, budget awareness
- more community support for young families
- need to reach more fathers with family programming
- support groups for families who attended family programming
- transportation
- unemployment/underemployment
- ways to link new Canadians to services and other new Canadians
- ways to integrate new Canadians into our society
- work training component for single parents taking CCS courses

Goals:

- To reach out to isolated, marginalized individuals and families who are not currently accessing literacy services and programs.
- To develop a strategy in conjunction with business and employment stakeholders to integrate or create literacy and essential skills training into the workplace.

Adults

Many of the programs outlined in the previous section also apply to this age group.

Public Health Nursing offers services for young families along with STD clinics and other health services to the community. They also offer help with breast-feeding clinics and areas involving newborns and their caregivers.

Chilliwack Community Services provides programs focused on children and their caregivers. They also provide English Language Services for Adults (ELSA), Immigrant Services and Settlement Services for immigrants.

School District No. 33: The Education Centre provides self-paced school curriculum to 15-40 year olds from 8:30 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. and provides Adult Upgrading – individual secondary school courses for adults who wish to complete, upgrade or enhance their education. Some community schools offer continuing education courses: (sewing, stained glass, karate), drop-in gym times, adult basic education, basic computer skills for members of their communities. The Fraser Valley Regional Library also offers adult programming to interested adults and seniors.

The University College of the Fraser Valley (UCFV) is a fully accredited, public post-secondary institution offering one master's degree, 12 bachelor's degrees, and many certificate and diploma programs including trades. UCFV also offers continuing studies and academic upgrading to adults of all ages UCFV provides an Adult Learning Centre at the Central Gateway for Families Project located at Central elementary school. UCFV trains and supports volunteer literacy tutors to work either one-on-one with adults in need of literacy supports or in on-campus and off-campus Adult Learning Centres.

DISCUSSION ON OUR COMMUNITY LITERACY INVENTORY AND THE GAPS

In most circumstances addictions, family violence, abuse, gang affiliation, cultural barriers and language barriers can create barriers to lifelong learning and participation in mainstream society.¹⁴ All these also impact sustainable community economic development.

Early Years

We found adequate programs and learning opportunities available for both new parents and their children. The Early Years offer opportunities for both learning and social inclusion. Our concerns centered around: increasing program participation levels for 'at risk' parents/children and the need to sustain current programming. Gaps included transportation concerns (including transportation to and from daycare); more knowledge, support and options for daycare; the need for: family programming during unconventional hours; childcare while parents attend family programming; more ways to reach/teach parents to be positive 'learner' role models to their children; increasing parental awareness of community service information, community family support and their role in teaching reading-readiness skills and book interaction; encouraging full family participation and minority group participation in current programming; early detection of children with learning difficulties along with a clearly defined avenue of supports for these children and their families.

Kindergarten to grade 7

There were few after school programs for children In the Kindergarten to grade 7 age group. There was a need for: affordable, quality out-of-school care; before and after school programming; homework clubs; help for those struggling with school curriculum; mentoring; a transportation network that allows for after school programming; smaller class sizes. We found limited: special-needs spaces and learning-assistance help; transitional supports. There is also a great need in finding ways to embrace parents who are not literate or who have had problems with the school system so they can establish open communication with the schools and learn how best to support their children's learning development.

Youth (grades 8 – 12)

Even though some community schools offered after-school programming, a lack of programming/supervision before and after school was reported. Crisis intervention programs were limited by budget constraints with time allocated to only the most pressing cases. There was a need for: home-work clubs; publicly funded support for border-line learners; life-skills mentors and tutors; transportation to support after-school programming; unconventional school hours (noon-6:00 p.m.); transportation help (bus passes) for students attending alternative schooling programs; opportunities to participate in service-oriented community activities; more stress being placed on the importance of life-long learning and setting of achievement goals at all grade levels; more public health related education at school that includes birth-control and childcare.

Young adults

Unemployment, underemployment and lack of affordable and safe housing all create barriers to social inclusion for this age group. There is a need for: life-skills coaching, mentoring, tutoring and budget awareness. Young parents need more community support for their children; there needs to be a work-training component for single parents taking CCS courses; there is a need to reach more fathers with family programming; free childcare while parents attend parenting classes; follow-up support; support groups, better (or public supported) transportation services.

Youth At-risk

Needs specific to young adults in the at-risk group (those disconnected from society) were: coordinated programming tailored and integrated to reach these groups; and a detox centre.

Minority groups

Needs for minority groups include a way to: reach out and inform them about the conflict resolution availability for parents and teens; link them with other new Canadians and services and to develop ways to integrate them into the larger community.

First Nations

Needs for First Nations include a way to: reach out and inform them about the conflict resolution availability for parents and teens; on-reserve parenting support, on-reserve reading clubs; bussing to all reserves.

Adults and Seniors

The majority of adults and seniors live busy, productive lives. There were many opportunities for people with cars to become involved in this community and a large support system for seniors that included areas from physical activities to classes, to social inclusion networks. The gaps that create social exclusion and stymie learning were centered around: health concerns; lack of adequate housing; problems other family members were experiencing; transportation; unemployment; underemployment; financial problems; isolation; lack of adequate literacy skills.

THE PLAN – OVERVIEW

The steering committee identified five strategies in their action plan with success statements for each area of focus. These include:

- 1) To have appropriate services and programs in place that reach out to isolated, marginalized individuals and families who are not currently accessing literacy services and programs.
- 2) To collaborate with local Early Years Committee to develop a long-term sustainability plan for the neighborhood-based system of high quality family development programs for children in the Early Years and their families. To promote local support to increase program sustainability.
- 3) To locate and support isolated parents with young children at risk of not being reading-ready for Kindergarten and isolated and unregistered child care providers to gain awareness, skills and tools to foster pre-literacy and emerging literacy development in young children in their care.
- 4) To facilitate the development of a strategic community plan for At-risk youth (ages 7-18).
- 5) To develop a strategy with business and employment stakeholders that integrates or creates literacy & essential skills training into the workplace.

Success statements for each strategy are included in the logic model as Outcomes. Please see individual Strategies for Outcome statements.

CHILLIWACK EARLY AND TRANSITION YEARS STRATEGIC PLAN

2006 – 2008 Chilliwack Early and Transition
Years Strategic Plan

of the

Early Years Sub-Committee of the Chilliwack Child and Youth Committee

2006 – 2008 Chilliwack Early and Transition Years Strategic Plan

(Revised November 2006)

Situation:

The development of children in Chilliwack was benchmarked in 2002 and measured again in 2005 on a population basis using the Early Development Instrument, administered by Kindergarten teachers. The resulting data shows wide disparity in developmental outcomes, health and well-being, with a distressingly high proportion in the bottom 10 percentile, indicating high levels of vulnerability. This data illuminates the impoverished experience of many children in the early years. These may be an effect of monetary impoverishment of the family in many cases. However, the correlation between financial poverty and poor developmental outcomes is not linear. Other factors impact on development. Supports and resources also mediate impact of poverty on development. The statistical picture of children in the early years has implications for children in the transition-to-school years (ages 6 to 9) as well.

Chilliwack also has many assets and strengths which provide the basis of support to families and their children. The Early Years Sub-committee of the Chilliwack Child and Youth Committee has brought together service providers and government representatives since the mid-1990's, in a collaborative working group to address the needs of this population. A network of universal and targeted programs and services exist. A sister sub-committee, the Chilliwack Interagency Parenting Committee, contributes significantly to the collection and dissemination of information about supports.

Chilliwack was also part of the three initial Learning Sites of the Make Children First Initiative (MCFI), launched in 2000. The funding and collaborative work of MCFI advanced community capacity, awareness of the importance of the early years and service provider collaboration by leaps and bounds. This initiative, initially a regional one, was devolved to a community-based one in 2004 and spread across the province. The funds and mandate of MCFI in Chilliwack now are the responsibility of the Early Years Committee, under the supervision of the Ministry of Children and Family Development Community Services Manager.

Another provincial level initiative, Success By 6, has also partnered with the Early Years Sub-committee allowing the committee to recommend on the use of Chilliwack's allocation of Provincial Government and fundraised dollars through the initiative.

The Chilliwack Early and Transition Years Strategic Plan outlines how the Early Years Sub-committee will utilize the assets of the committee and the community to address the needs of young and transition-aged children to provide opportunities for all children to achieve their developmental potential and enjoy good health and well-being.

2006–08 CHILLIWACK EARLY AND TRANSITION YEARS STRATEGIC PLAN

(Revised April 18, 2006)

Situation:

The development of children in Chilliwack was benchmarked in 2002 and measured again in 2005 on a population basis using the Early Development Instrument, administered by Kindergarten teachers. The resulting data shows wide disparity in developmental outcomes, health and well-being, with a distressingly high proportion in the bottom 10 percentile, indicating high levels of vulnerability. This data illuminates the impoverished experience of many children in the early years. These may be an effect of monetary impoverishment of the family in many cases. However, the correlation between financial poverty and poor developmental outcomes is not linear. Other factors impact on development. Supports and resources also mediate impact of poverty on development. The statistical picture of children in the early years has implications for children in the transition-to-school years (ages 6 to 9) as well.

Chilliwack also has many assets and strengths which provide the basis of support to families and their children. The Prenatal to Nine Sub-committee of the Chilliwack Child and Youth Committee has brought together service providers and government representatives since 199xxx, in a collaborative working group to address the needs of this population. A network of universal and targeted programs and services exist. A sister sub-committee, the Chilliwack Interagency Parenting Committee, contributes significantly to the collection and dissemination of information about supports.

Chilliwack was also part of the three initial Learning Sites of the Make Children First Initiative (MCFI), launched in 2000. The funding and collaborative work of MCFI advanced community capacity, awareness of the importance of the early years and service provider collaboration by leaps and bounds. This initiative, initially a regional one, was devolved to a community-based one in 2004 and spread across the province. The funds and mandate of MCFI in Chilliwack now are the responsibility of the Prenatal to Nine Committee, under the supervision of the Ministry of Children and Family Development Community Services Manager.

Another provincial level initiative, Success By 6, has also partnered with the Prenatal to Nine Committee allowing the committee to recommend on the use of Chilliwack's allocation of Provincial Government and fundraised dollars through the initiative.

The Chilliwack Early Year and Transition Years Strategic Plan outlines how the Prenatal to Nine Committee will utilize the assets of the committee and the community to address the needs of young and transition- aged children to provide opportunities for all children to achieve their developmental potential and enjoy good health and well-being
