Community Forestry: Local Land, Local People, Local Decisions, Local Benefits

With new linkages to bioenergy, value added manufacturing and the carbon economy, Community Forest Agreements (CFAs) present a unique and exciting opportunity. There are now over 50 Community Forests in BC and options are being explored to expand the program further. With a CFA, a community can determine the priority values and objectives for local forest management and how the benefits of management will be distributed. In turn, business diversification can be leveraged and healthy communities fostered. Co-hosted by the BC Ministry of Forests and Range and the BC Community Forest Association, this session will provide participants with an overview of the CFA, highlight the successes and lessons learned to date, and will share ideas for the future of community forestry in BC.
