Employment Standards Act

Self-Help Kit

The Self-Help Kit (the Kit) is designed to help employees and employers solve workplace disputes quickly and fairly. This is the first step in trying to resolve a dispute about outstanding wages. The Kit provides you and your employer with information on basic employee/employer rights and responsibilities in the workplace. Included are a “Request for Payment” form and a letter from the Employment Standards Branch for you to give to your employer.

If the problem is not resolved, you may then choose to file a complaint with the Employment Standards Branch. Using the Kit does not mean a complaint has been filed or accepted by the Employment Standards Branch. You must file a complaint within six months from when the problem took place or your employment ended.

If you are within 30 days of the end of the six-month period you should file your complaint with the Employment Standards Branch and then use the Kit to try to resolve the problem. If you work under a union collective agreement you should seek assistance from your union.

You are not required to use the Self-Help Kit if:

- You are under the age of 19;
- Your complaint is related to a leave provision of the Act (pregnancy leave, parental leave, family responsibility leave, bereavement leave, compassionate care leave, reservists' leave or jury duty);
- The business has closed or the landlord or bailiff has locked the doors; or you are concerned that assets may be removed;
- You are a farm worker, textile or garment worker, or domestic;
- You have significant language or comprehension difficulties; or
- You provide a letter that you have already sent to the employer identifying the issue or dispute under the Act and requesting a resolution.

For more information, contact the Employment Standards Branch Information line at: 1-800 663-3316 (toll-free in B.C.), or (250) 612-4100 in the Prince George area or from outside the province.

If you are not required to use the Kit for one of the reasons listed above, or if you were unable to resolve your problem by using it, you may file a complaint with the Employment Standards Branch. Fill out a Complaint and Information Form available at our offices (addresses on page 3) or on our website at www.gov.bc.ca/EmploymentStandards.

Mail or hand-deliver it to one of our offices or submit it electronically using the instructions on the website.

Getting Started

Follow These Three Steps:

1. Review the Problem and Outline Your Claim

Identify what wages you feel are owing to you and why. Review the factsheets which relate to your claim. They are available on our website or at Employment Standards Branch offices. Ensure the problems you have identified are covered by the Employment Standards Act by answering the following two questions:

Question 1: Does the problem fall under the Employment Standards Act? (For example, is it in one of the following areas?)

- You were not paid money for hours you worked;
- You were not paid overtime;
- You were paid less than you thought you should be;
- Money was deducted from your pay cheque to pay for the employer's business costs (i.e. dine & dash);
- You were not paid for statutory holidays;
- You did not get meal breaks or proper time off between shifts;
- You did not get proper leave;
- You did not receive minimum daily pay;
- You did not get annual vacation or vacation pay;
- You did not get notice of termination or pay when your employment was ended;
- A talent agency took more than 15% from your pay;
- You had to buy your uniform or pay for cleaning it.

Question 2: Has the problem taken place within the past six months?

OR

If you no longer work for the employer, has it been less than six months since your last day worked?

If you answered YES to BOTH questions, your problem is covered by the Act. If you answered NO to either question, your problem is not covered by the Act.

2. Complete the Request for Payment Form

This form is important. You will calculate what you believe you are owed, and send it directly to your employer. Fill out only the sections that apply to your problem. Add information or calculations on separate pages if necessary to fully explain your claim. Sign your form and include the date and your contact information. Calculate your gross wages.

3. Send Your Employer the Following Information from the Kit:

- a. Information Notice to the Employer from the Employment Standards Branch (Date this letter);
- b. Your completed Request for Payment form;
- c. The Complaint Resolution factsheet. (You may also include the Guide to the Employment Standards Act or any other factsheets from the website that relate to the problem);
- d. Include any information regarding the problems you identified that may help clarify or resolve the dispute.

You can hand-deliver, mail, email or fax your package to your employer. Your employer will have 15 days to respond. If your employer agrees to resolve your dispute and pays you directly, your employment standards issue will be resolved. Your employer may take statutory deductions.

4. Keep a copy of your completed Request for Payment form.

What if You and Your Employer do not Agree?

If you and your employer don't resolve the problem, or if your employer does not respond to your request within 15 days, you may file a complaint with the Employment Standards Branch. Complaint forms are available at our offices or on our website.

To assist in the dispute resolution process, please enclose copies of any other records you may have, including hours of work, pay stubs, your Record of Employment, letters from your employer, etc.

Information Notice to the Employer from the Employment Standards Branch

The Employment Standards Branch encourages employers and employees to resolve their disputes over the payment of wages or other issues under the Employment Standards Act and Regulation without direct government intervention. The Branch's role is to:

- Ensure compliance with the Employment Standards Act;
- Facilitate the resolution of complaints;
- Adjudicate a solution to disputes when necessary.

Your employee or former employee believes he/she has a problem under the Employment Standards Act, and by using the Self-Help Kit is attempting to resolve this dispute without Branch intervention. The following attachments are included:

- Complaint Resolution factsheet;
- Other factsheets or the Guide to the Employment Standards Act;
- Request for Payment form, and any other information related to this dispute.

If you agree you owe your employee or former employee wages, please send them a cheque for the full amount owing less any statutory deductions. If the problem is about something other than wages you must comply with the requirements of the Employment Standards Act. If you do not respond to the employee within 15 days, a complaint may be filed with the Employment Standards Branch.

If you have any questions about minimum standards of employment or you need further clarification on the complaint resolution process, please contact our Employment Standards Branch Information Line at 1 800 663-3316 or (250) 612-4100 or refer to the Complaint Resolution factsheet and the B.C. Employment Standards Act available online at www.gov.bc.ca/EmploymentStandards

If the Employment Standards Branch issues a determination finding that an employer has contravened the legislation, one or more mandatory penalties will be imposed.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Complaint Resolution

The Employment Standards Branch encourages employees and employers to solve problems without immediate government intervention. If the parties cannot resolve their problem themselves, the Branch will try to facilitate a resolution or, if necessary, will issue a decision.

Understanding rights and responsibilities

The Employment Standards Act and Regulation set out minimum workplace standards for most employees in British Columbia. Some professionals are exempt from all or part of the Act. Some sectors and industries are subject to specific employment standards provisions which only apply to them.

Information about employment standards, including a guide to the Act and factsheets on various subjects, is available from any Employment Standards Branch office or on the Branch website.

The Act sets a six-month time limit for filing complaints. It also sets a six-month limit on the time period the Branch can go back to see whether an employer owes money to an employee.

Using the Self-Help Kit

The first step an employee takes to resolve a dispute over the payment of wages or other issues is to contact the employer directly by using a Self-Help Kit. The Kit helps the employee to define the problem and identify the desired solution by:

- Deciding whether the Employment Standards Act applies to his or her situation;
- Assessing whether the employer is contravening the Act;
- Calculating how much money is owed; and

- Making a written request to the employer to pay money owing or make changes required under the Act.

If the employer agrees with the employee's request, money can be paid directly to the employee. At this point the matter is resolved.

Self-Help Kit not required

In certain circumstances, an employee will not be required to use the Kit. Examples are:

- The employer's business is closed;
- The matter involves a person under the age of 19;
- The complaint is related to a leave provision of the Act (pregnancy leave, parental leave, bereavement leave, compassionate care leave, family responsibility leave or jury duty);
- The employee is a farm worker, garment or textile worker, or domestic;
- The employee has significant language or comprehension difficulties; or
- The employee has already sent a letter to the employer attempting to resolve the issue.

Filing a Complaint

If an employee is unable to resolve a dispute by using the Kit, if an employer does not respond, or if an employee is not required to use the Kit, an employee may make a complaint to the Employment Standards Branch.

Employment standards complaints must be in writing and can be faxed, mailed, dropped off in person or submitted online. The complainant should provide any available evidence that relates to the complaint.

Dispute resolution

Although some matters are resolved through investigation, most are resolved through a process of education, mediation and/or adjudication.

Investigation

If a matter is referred to investigation, the investigating officer will gather information and evidence from both parties. The officer will put each party's position and evidence to the other party for a response. The officer will try to resolve the complaint informally, but if that is not possible, the officer will make a decision and issue a Determination.

Education

Employment Standards Branch staff will review the complaint and the evidence that has been provided. The Branch will contact the parties to gather more information and to explain the provisions of the Act. If the employer resolves the complaint at this point and pays any money owing, no further action will be taken and the file will be closed.

If the complaint is not resolved, it will be referred to mediation. Both parties will be asked to provide anything they think will be helpful to resolve the dispute, such as payroll information, records of hours worked and wages paid, and documentation of disciplinary actions.

Mediation

An officer of the Branch will conduct a mediation, which is an informal meeting between the employer and the employee. It will be held in person or by teleconference. (See Employment Standards Mediation factsheet)

If the parties resolve their dispute, the officer conducting the mediation will help them draft a

"Settlement Agreement" that both the complainant and the employer will sign. Once signed, the agreement is binding on the parties. If it is not honoured, it can be filed in Supreme Court and enforced as a judgment of the Court.

Even if mediation does not resolve the dispute, it may still help the parties clarify the issues, understand each other's point of view, and identify what facts are agreed upon and what issues remain in dispute.

Adjudication Hearings

If the complaint is not resolved through mediation, the Branch will schedule an adjudication hearing to be conducted by an officer. If a hearing is scheduled, both parties will be required to attend along with any necessary witnesses. The hearing may be held in person or by teleconference (See Adjudication Hearings factsheet.)

Determinations

If a matter is not resolved informally during an investigation, or at any time during the mediation/adjudication process up to the end of the adjudication hearing, the officer conducting the adjudication will issue a written decision called a Determination. If the Determination finds that money is owing to the complainant or that the employer has otherwise contravened the Act, it will order the employer to pay the amount owing, cease contravening the Act and pay one or more mandatory penalties.

If an employer does not pay the amount ordered, the Determination can be filed in Supreme Court and enforced as a judgment of the court. This may include turning the matter over to a Court Bailiff for collection.

Appeals

A Determination can be appealed to the Employment Standards Tribunal. More information on appeals is available on the Tribunal website at www.bcest.bc.ca.
