INTER-MINISTERIAL PROTOCOLS FOR THE PROVISION OF SUPPORT SERVICES TO SCHOOL-AGED CHILDREN

BACKGROUND

Services for school-aged children are supported and/or funded by the Ministries of Children and Family Development, Education, Healthy Living and Sport, Health Services and Public Safety and Solicitor General, but are delivered through the Ministry of Children and Family Development regions, Boards of Education and independent school authorities, Health Authorities or by local agencies. At times school-aged children receive services that cross the jurisdiction of more than one Ministry or Ministry-funded service. In these circumstances inter-ministry protocols are required so that services are provided in an accessible, understandable and co-ordinated manner.

PURPOSE

These inter-ministry protocols are intended to support and guide the co-ordinated delivery of effective-services to school-aged children by:

- establishing an agreed-upon range of services;
- clarifying the roles and responsibilities;
- establishing a process for the regular review of the protocols; and
- identifying a dispute resolution process.

SCOPE

The protocols apply to services, funded and/or delivered by the Government of British Columbia, that support school-aged children at school or in their homes and communities. For the purposes of the protocols, school-aged children are defined in the School Act (Part 1 section 1 (1) and Part 2 section 3 (1) and the Independent School Act (Section 1 subsection 2).

REVIEW

Each protocol will be reviewed every five years. Any signatory to these protocols can ask for a review of a protocol before the end of the five year term.

PRINCIPLES

The following principles have guided the development of the protocols. They are also intended to assist in their implementation, review and resolution of disagreements between Ministries and/or Ministry funded service providers.

1. Child Centred Approach

Support services will be co-ordinated to respond to the strengths and needs of children and youth. Children and youth will be involved in decision making consistent with their developmental abilities.

2. Focus on Learning, Health and Development

Support services will be planned and delivered to optimize the learning, health and development of children and youth.

Services will promote health, be preventative or be provided early in order to increase the likelihood of positive outcomes for children and youth.

Support services will promote inclusion so children and youth with special needs can be fully participating members of their schools and communities.

3. Family Focused Approach

Support services will recognize the key role parents/guardians and families have in optimizing learning, health and development of their children. They will be involved in planning and decision making for their children.

4. Respect for Diversity

Support services will be planned and delivered in a manner that respects community diversity. (e.g., race, ethnicity, gender, age, ability, culture, ancestry, language, religious beliefs, sexual orientation or socio-economic background).

5. Co-ordinated and Effective

Support services, including transitions, will be planned collaboratively and delivered in an integrated manner.

Support services will be planned and implemented based on evidence (knowledge and research).

6. Commitment to Collaboration

Protocol partners or service providers will strive to be collaborative in their provision of services to children and youth.

7. Dispute Resolution

Disagreements among protocol partners or service providers, should any occur, will whenever possible be addressed early and informally to preserve respectful working relationships and ensure that services are provided in keeping with the goals of these protocols. In accordance with the principles that underpin these protocols, dispute resolution will take place as close as possible to the community where the services are being provided.

Rarely will disagreements need to be raised beyond those outlined in the local agreements. Should dispute resolution become necessary at a regional level, a dispute resolution framework is included within each protocol. The framework is based on the principles of administrative fairness and due process.

PROTOCOL AGREEMENT

BETWEEN:

The Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Children and Family Development and the Ministries of Health Services and Healthy Living and Sport (through Health Authorities).

REGARDING THE FOLLOWING SERVICES:

AUDIOLOGICAL SUPPORT SERVICES

I. Background:

Hearing loss can create a communication barrier and present obstacles to children's opportunities to achieve the goals of education. Comprehensive planning is needed to ensure that children entering school with a pre-identified hearing loss are seamlessly supported from a technical and educational perspective to attain educational goals. While identification of hearing loss is preferable before a child reaches school age, it is imperative that a well integrated approach be in place for identification, assessment, monitoring, and intervention services for school-aged children with hearing loss. Moreover, a well integrated approach to support services for school-aged children requires effective cross-ministry and cross-agency communications systems and cooperation to be in place.

The Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Health Services, the Ministry of Healthy Living and Sport, the Ministry of Children and Family Development, Boards of Education/participating independent school authorities, schools, Health Authorities and parents work collaboratively to raise awareness about the causes and the implications of hearing loss. They work collaboratively to develop and implement support services and education programs that address the social and academic needs of school-aged children with hearing loss. Key service providers involved may include, but are not limited to, audiologists, teachers of the deaf and hard of hearing, speech-language pathologists, specially trained teachers' assistants, and sign-language interpreters.

Equipment and services provided in the home, community, and school need to be co-ordinated to facilitate a seamless service for school-aged children and their families. In regions, the process for how school district/independent school authorities and health authority staff work together to provide audiology services should be collaboratively developed.

'Audiology services' covered in this protocol includes identification, assessment/diagnostic, monitoring, and intervention services where cross-ministry coordination, communication and collaboration are required to ensure a quality service to school-aged children.

As of April 1, 2010, all audiologists must be registered with the College of Speech and Hearing Professionals in British Columbia, and will be expected to adhere to their roles and responsibilities as defined in the Speech and Hearing Health Professions Regulation 413/2008 and the College bylaws.

II. Children Served:

School-aged children who are deaf or hard of hearing enrolled in and attending:

- public schools;
- participating Group 1 and 2 independent school authorities.

III. Services Provided:

Boards of Education, participating independent school authorities, Health Authorities, and the Ministry of Children and Family Development and where applicable, Delegated Aboriginal Child and Family Services Agencies will co-ordinate the following services:

- a regional process for sharing of information and coordination of audiology services that is collaboratively developed, and includes an agreement with respect to assistive listening equipment;
- raise the awareness in all school-aged children and their families about hearing health and healthy lifestyle choices to prevent hearing loss;
- audiology assessment by an audiologist for school-aged children identified as having, or suspected of having, a hearing loss;
- provision of information from audiology assessments to inform the planning of education programs or services in compliance with the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act;
- access for all school-aged children with an educationally significant hearing loss to an education program that addresses their needs;
- access for all school-aged children with an educationally significant hearing loss to amplification and assistive listening equipment as needed;
- training for school personnel in the appropriate use and application of hearing aids and assistive listening equipment; and
- coordination of equipment and services during periods of transition (into school, between schools, and into adult services).

IV. Obligations of each Ministry:

The Ministry of Education

- The Ministry of Education provides services through Boards of Education, participating independent school authorities, and the Provincial Resource Program-Auditory Outreach;
- The Ministry of Education provides supplementary special needs funding and delegates responsibility to Boards of Education/participating independent school authorities for special education supports for school-aged children enrolled in their schools (students) who have educationally significant hearing loss¹;

- The Ministry of Education requires Boards of Education/participating independent school authorities to refer students who may have an educationally significant hearing loss to medical practitioners or audiologists for a needs assessment to determine if they require assistive listening equipment;
- Boards of Education/participating independent school authorities must design an Individual Education Plan (IEP) for students with educationally significant hearing loss as soon as possible after the student is identified as being a student with special needs by the board/participating independent school authority, and must provide learning activities in accordance with the IEP;
- The Ministry of Education provides funding for the acquisition and maintenance of a set list of assistive listening equipment in schools to support students with educationally significant hearing loss in cases where the health authority audiologist's assessment and recommendations confirm the need for equipment. Procedures for this provision are provided in Ministry of Education Special Education Services: A Manual of Policies, Procedures and Guidelines. Agreements on how equipment is delivered and fitted will be developed regionally;
- The Ministry of Education will maintain the set list of assistive listening equipment and make this set list available to the health authority audiologist for selection;

- The Manual of Policies, Procedures and Guidelines is kept current, outlining the process for access, maintenance, returns, and liability for assistive listening equipment (often referred to as auditory training equipment);
- Boards of Education/participating independent school authorities will work collaboratively with health authority personnel to support school-aged children with hearing loss; and

V. Dispute Resolution:

Disagreements among protocol partners or service providers, should any occur, will whenever possible be addressed early and informally to preserve respectful working relationships and ensure that services are provided in keeping with the goals of this protocol.

At the regional level, the parties to this protocol should have a process in place to guide resolving conflicts that may occur when providing services for children and families in an integrated manner as articulated in this protocol. The conflict resolution process will adhere to the principle of Commitment to Collaboration described in section 6 (p.3) and to the principles of administrative fairness² including:

- those affected by a decision should be involved in the making of that decision;
- those affected by a decision should be informed and consulted in a meaningful way and have their point of view listened to and considered; and

Educators and all service providers recognize the strong relationship between a student's health and learning. Schools and qualified health professionals have a collective responsibility for promoting the healthy growth and development, and academic success of school-aged children.

To this end, it is appropriate practice for educators and health professionals to collaborate annually in developing a comprehensive plan for health services for students. Such a plan should include:

- ongoing commitment to ensuring an environment that promotes health and prevents disease or injury;
- identification of school health needs and priorities;
- delivery of services to meet those needs; and
- identification and support of students with health concerns.

Boards of Education and participating independent school authorities will work collaboratively with local health professionals in identifying the specific services to be delivered and included in the annual plan for delivery of health services.

II. Children Served:

School-aged children enrolled in and attending:

I. Background:

Since the early 1970's, speech-language pathology services for school-aged children in public schools have been provided within the school system, as a part of the special education services provided by Boards of Education. In the late 1980's, the provincial government reviewed ministry mandates for providing speech-language pathology services and confirmed that the Ministry of Education and Boards of Education would retain responsibility for speech-language pathology services for children and youth of school age enrolled in public schools.

Speech-language pathology is defined in the Speech and Hearing Health Professions Regulation 413/2008 as "the health profession in which a person provides, for the purposes of promoting and maintaining communicative health, the services of assessment, treatment, rehabilitation and prevention of speech, language and related communication disorders and conditions, and vocal tract dysfunction, including related feeding and swallowing disorders."

Ministerial Order 149/89 indicates "A board of a school district shall provide speech-language therapy services for students of school age who attend a school in the district and whose education is adversely affected by oral communication difficulties." Communication difficulties are referred to in this protocol as communication disorders.

In some circumstances, the Ministry of Children and Family Development provides additional speech-language pathology services for school-aged children who qualify for such programs as Autism Funding or the At Home Program.

Speech-language pathology services for children younger than school age fall within the mandate of the Ministry of Children and Family Development and the Ministry of Healthy Living and Sport and are provided by speech/language pathologists working throughout the province in public health centres and contracted community agencies. To avoid disruption, services need to be organized as to promote joint planning, collaboration, and sharing of information when these children make the transition to school.

In some cases, communities may elect to consolidate resources provided by the Ministry of Children and Family Development, Boards of Education, participating independent school authorities, and regional Health Authorities, establishing local agreements for community speech-language pathology positions.

As of April 1, 2010, speech-language pathologists must be registered with the College of Speech and Hearing Professionals in British Columbia, and will be expected to adhere to their roles and responsibilities as defined in the Speech and Hearing Health Professions Regulation 413/2008 and the College Bylaws.

II. Children Served:

School-aged children with suspected or confirmed communication disorders enrolled in and attending:

- public schools;
- participating Group 1 and Group 2 independent school authorities;

- planning and monitoring of tasks assigned to teaching assistants or paraprofessionals to support children and youth with communication disorders; and

- communication and collaboration between school and community service providers to support consistent plans of therapy across settings.

IV. Obligations of each Ministry:

Shared Planning

Policies and guidelines of all three ministries will encourage shared planning and a collaborative and co-ordinated approach that supports the needs of school-aged children. Privacy and information sharing policies for assessment, planning and intervention are in accordance with the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act (FOIPOP) and the School Act, section 79.

The Ministry of Education:

- provides funds to Boards of Education and participating group 1 and 2 independent school authorities as part of the per pupil allotment, to support the provision of speech-language services; and
- has legislation, policy and guidelines regarding Boards of Education's provision of speech language pathology services through Ministerial Order and the Special Education Service: A Manual of Policies, Procedures and Guidelines.

The Ministry of Children and Family Development:

- contracts the delivery of the Early Intervention Therapy Program and has policy and guidelines for the provision of these services, including speech-language pathology services for children younger than school age with special needs and individualized transition plans for children entering school Early Intervention Therapy Program Guidelines; and
- provides funds for specialized therapies which may include speech-language pathology services for school-aged children who are eligible for Autism Funding, the Community Brain Injury Program and/or the At Home Program School Aged Extended Therapies, in addition to those available through Boards of Education and participating independent school authorities.

The Ministry of Health Services and the Ministry of Healthy Living and Sport:

- provide funding and/or policy direction to Health Authorities and delegates responsibility to the Health Authorities for speech and language services.

Health Authorities will:

- provide public health speech-language pathology services, and individualized transition plans for children entering school. These plans will be developed in consultation with parents, educators and school-based speech-language pathologists.

V. Dispute Resolution:

Disagreements among protocol partners or service providers, should any occur, will whenever possible be addressed early and informally to preserve respectful working relationships and ensure that services are provided in keeping with the goals of this protocol.

At the regional level, the parties to this protocol should have a process in place to guide resolving conflicts that may occur when providing services for children and families in an integrated manner as articulated in this protocol. The conflict resolution process will adhere to the principle of Commitment to Collaboration described in section 6 (p.3) and to the principles of administrative fairness⁶ including:

- those affected by a decision should be involved in the making of that decision;
- those affected by a decision should be informed and consulted in a meaningful way and have their point of view listened to and considered; and
- decisions should be made within a timely, fair, and consistent process and be based on relevant facts and without bias.

The regional conflict resolution processes will clearly identify:

- the roles and positions of individuals within each organization who have responsibility for resolving conflicts;
- the steps and stages of the process from informal to formal;
- the timeframes for completing the process; and
- what parties should do if they cannot reach a resolution.

PROTOCOL AGREEMENT

BETWEEN:

The Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Children and Family Development and the Ministry of Health (through Health Authorities).

REGARDING THE FOLLOWING SERVICES:

PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSESSMENT SERVICES FOR SCHOOL-AGED CHILDREN

I. Background:

Psychological assessment can be undertaken for a range of purposes such as to help inform a diagnostic and or functional assessment, for the purpose of informing intervention/accommodations strategies, and/or to support school-aged children in their learning.

While a range of psychological assessment services is available through this protocol's signatory organizations, based upon eligibility criteria established by each ministry, it is understood by each organization that psychological assessment entails the seeking of evidence from many sources, and the realization that many factors impact human functioning. For the purpose of this protocol, the focus of the psychological assessment is school-aged children and their educational needs.

Identification, assessment, and planning services, including school-related psychological assessment services are provided to collect information about students' learning, development and/or functioning at school and to support school-aged children with the most effective programming possible.

In some cases, children enter the school system having already been assessed. In other cases, children and youth are assessed through a progressive process outlined in Special Education Services: A Manual of Policies, Procedures and Guidelines. This process begins in the classroom, with clear and systematic teacher observations and classroom assessment/testing, which teachers use to develop a detailed picture of a student's strengths and needs and to guide their instructional practice and planning. When more specialized information and support is needed, this requires further assessment by specialist teachers, speech-language pathologists, school counselors, and/or school psychologists.

In the case of medical/health related needs (e.g., autism spectrum disorder, fetal alcohol spectrum disorder, chronic health impairments, mental health disorders, hearing loss, vision loss), psychological assessment services for school-aged children require the involvement of health professionals or multi-disciplinary teams.

In the case of mental health problems and disorders and/or substance use problems, psychological assessment and mental health services are a component of Mental Health Services and are covered under the protocol "Services for Children and Youth with Mental Health Problems and Disorders and/or Substance Use Problems."

Psychological assessment can require the inclusion of information from a variety of sources depending on the scope and purpose of the specific evaluation. For this reason, Boards of Education, participating independent school authorities, the Ministry of Health, Health Authorities, the Ministry of Children and Family Development, and where applicable, Delegated Aboriginal Child and Family Service Agencies need to work collaboratively to promote the sharing of relevant information that is necessary for the psychological assessment.

Once a psychological assessment has been completed, school staff need access to pertinent information in order to determine the implications of the findings on the child's or youth's educational program and to plan services and instruction accordingly. Sharing of information, including for the purposes of transition, must be in accordance with the policy and legislative requirements of each ministry, and the legislation governing each area.

Psychologists employed by the Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Children and Family Development are required to follow legislative requirement of the Health Professions Act that mandates that psychologists practicing in British Columbia must be registered with their self-regulatory body (the College of Psychologists of British Columbia) and are expected to adhere to their roles and responsibilities as defined by the Psychologists Regulation 289/2008 and the College Bylaws. School Psychologists employed by boards of education are required to follow the practice standards of the British Columbia Association of School Psychologists. The exemption clause of the Health Professions Act permits these individuals acting in the course of employment by a board of education, a provincial, federal or municipal government or government agency, independent school authorities, or a francophone education authority, to practice psychology when qualifications in psychology are a condition of such employment.

II. Children Served:

School-aged children who have learning, behavioural or social-emotional difficulties related to their achievement in school, and who are enrolled in and attending:

- public schools;
- participating Group 1 and Group 2 independent school authorities;
- band schools on First Nations Reserves (at the discretion of band school authorities);
- Provincial Resource Programs.

III. Services Provided:

Boards of Education, participating independent school authorities, Health Authorities, the Ministry of Children and Family Development, and where applicable, Delegated Aboriginal Child and Family Services Agencies will co-ordinate the following identification, assessment and planning services:

- a range of psychological assessment services, including identification of strengths and needs, recommendations that inform accommodations to the instructional program for students who exhibit serious educational problems, and diagnosis as appropriate;
- specialized psychological assessment services that are beyond the scope of Boards of Education or participating independent school authorities (e.g., mental health services,³ neuropsychology assessments, assessments for autism spectrum disorder, fetal alcohol spectrum disorder) with the informed consent of the parents and, if possible, the student; in accordance with the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act;
- sharing of psychological assessment information that is pertinent to the educational needs of the student, as necessary, and in accordance with the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act (FOIPPA), Child, Family and Community Services Act (CFCSA), the School Act, and their respective regulations, and consistent with the Joint Educational Planning and Support for Children and Youth in Care: Cross Ministry Guidelines;
- coordination of psychological assessment services across sectors where children and youth have multiple disabilities or dual diagnoses (e.g., developmental disabilities mental health services);
- identification of the essential characteristics of a suitable program for the student (e.g., methods of intervention, teaching strategies, learning strategies, program accommodations);
- the transfer of psychological assessment information as children transition into and out of school, as specifically authorized under, and in accordance with, the applicable legislation.

IV. Obligations of each Ministry:

The Ministry of Education (through Boards of Education and participating independent school authorities) will:

- provide funding for school psychological assessment services to support the identification, diagnosis, and planning of educational needs of school-aged children;
- provide funding to employ school psychologists or psychologists directly or contract the services of a registered psychologist in private practice; and
- provide guidelines to Boards of Educations and participating independent school authorities through Ministerial Order and the Special Education Service: A Manual of Policies, Procedures and Guidelines for standards of practice in identification, assessment, and planning for children and youth.

The Ministry of Health (through Health Authorities) will:

- provide opportunities for regional and specialized assessment services (i.e., BC Autism Assessment Network/Complex Developmental Behavioural Conditions/Sunny Hill Hospital services for students for whom the diagnosis of Autism Spectrum Disorder or Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder may be a likelihood) through clinical and hospital settings which serve children (within the context of the program mandates, eligibility criteria and local, regional and provincial delivery of healthcare services).

The Ministry of Children and Family Development (MCFD) will:

- arrange for necessary psychological assessment for children and youth in care when the purpose of the psychological assessment:
 - is required for a MCFD related reason only (e.g., the assessment of a child for the purpose of supporting an adoption placement decision); and
 - is required for needs other than supporting school-aged children in achieving the goals of their education programs.
- carry out these psychological assessments through existing governmental services or through contracts with psychologists in private practice, as appropriate.

V. Dispute Resolution:

Disagreements among protocol partners or service providers, should any occur, will whenever possible be addressed early and informally to preserve respectful working relationships and ensure that services are provided in keeping with the goals of this protocol.

At the regional level, the parties to this protocol should have a process in place to guide resolving conflicts that may occur when providing services for children and families in an integrated manner as articulated in this protocol. The conflict resolution process will adhere to the principle of Commitment to Collaboration described in section 6 (p.3) and to the principles of administrative fairness⁴ including:

- those affected by a decision should be involved in the making of that decision;
- those affected by a decision should be informed and consulted in a meaningful way and have their point of view listened to and considered; and
- decisions should be made within a timely, fair, and consistent process and be based on relevant facts without bias, and within existing financial constraints of the signatories.

The regional conflict resolution processes will clearly identify:

- the roles and positions of individuals within each organization who have responsibility for resolving conflicts;
- the steps and stages of the process from informal to formal;
- the timeframes for completing the process; and
- what parties should do if they cannot reach a resolution.

PROTOCOL AGREEMENT

BETWEEN:

The Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Children and Family Development, and the Ministry of Health (through Health Authorities).

REGARDING THE FOLLOWING SERVICES:

SERVICES FOR CHILDREN AND YOUTH WITH MENTAL HEALTH PROBLEMS AND DISORDERS AND/OR SUBSTANCE USE PROBLEMS

I. Background:

Mental health and well-being is essential for all children and youth to thrive and meet their potential. To support the mental health needs of children and youth in British Columbia, a range of services for promotion, prevention and treatment is necessary and should be determined by local needs and resources.

When children or youth experience problems or disorders related to mental health and/or substance use, a coordinated and collaborative approach is necessary. Children and youth with mental health problems and disorders and/or substance use problems have the best chance for being successful when they are supported to remain in their families, schools and communities. Regardless of the location of treatment, it is essential that contact be maintained, and information shared, as appropriate, between the services, families, and the school to ensure an effective program.

In a minority of instances, residential treatment or short-term hospitalization may be necessary. Such placements should not unduly disrupt the student's educational program. Transfer of relevant information, as specifically authorized under, and in accordance with, the applicable legislation, when residential treatment or short-term hospitalization are necessary, and the development of a plan for transition back into the school system at an appropriate point in the treatment, are essential elements of support for children and youth with mental health problems and disorders and/or substance use problems.

If children or youth place either themselves or others at risk of harm, service providers will work collaboratively to provide a response most appropriate to the potential level of risk.

The Ministry of Education provides a wide range of district, school and classroom services and supports for children and youth with mental health problems and disorders and substance use problems, including school counseling. The role of school counselors is to identify students who require referral for mental health or substance use intervention, make referrals and provide school-related support and services as appropriate, provide counseling on school-related issues, and co-ordinate school-based consultation on student needs and strategies for support. Their role does not involve treatment of mental health problems or disorders and/or substance use problems.

The Ministry of Children and Family Development (MCFD) provides community-based and residential mental health services for children and youth with mental health problems and disorders, including those with co-occurring problems such as substance use problems; developmental disabilities, or involvement in the justice system, and their families. The mental health staff of MCFD work collaboratively with children and youth, families, schools and other service providers.

The Ministry of Health, through Health Authorities, provides an array of community and specialized hospital-based services for school-aged children with mental health problems and disorders and/or substance use problems, and their families.

V. Dispute Resolution:

Disagreements among protocol partners or service providers, should any occur, will whenever possible be addressed early and informally to preserve respectful working relationships and ensure that services are provided in keeping with the goals of this protocol.

At the regional level, the parties to this protocol should have a process in place to guide resolving conflicts that may occur when providing services for children and families in an integrated manner as articulated in this protocol. The conflict resolution process will adhere to the principle of Commitment to Collaboration described in section 6 (p.3) and to the principles of administrative fairness¹ including:

- those affected by a decision should be involved in the making of that decision;
- those affected by a decision should be informed and consulted in a meaningful way and have their point of view listened to and considered; and
- decisions should be made within a timely, fair, and consistent process and be based on relevant facts and without bias and within existing financial constraints of the signatories.

The regional conflict resolution processes will clearly identify:

- the roles and positions of individuals within each organization who have responsibility for resolving conflicts;
- the steps and stages of the process from informal to formal;
- the timeframes for completing the process; and
- what parties should do if they cannot reach a resolution.

PROTOCOL AGREEMENT

BETWEEN:

The Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Children and Family Development, the Ministry of Health (through Health Authorities), and the Ministry of Justice

REGARDING THE FOLLOWING SERVICES:

SAFE SCHOOLS

I. Background:

Safety is important in all aspects of a child's life - at home, at school, and in the community. This protocol covers safety and schools. It describes how parties to this protocol support British Columbia schools in maintaining a social milieu in which students feel safe, and in which schools are able to focus their attention on teaching, learning and supporting students to achieve their maximum potential.

Interest in the issue of school safety is high - both within British Columbia schools and the wider community. This interest stems, in part, from increasing concern about violence within our communities. It stems, as well, from a recognition that a strong relationship exists between feelings of safety and belonging and a student's ability to learn.

In a school that is safe, caring and orderly, individuals:

- demonstrate attitudes and actions that support an environment that is resistant to disruption and intrusion;
- feel a sense of connectedness and belonging;
- treat one another in positive supportive ways;
- focus on purposeful learning activity;
- know and exercise their rights and responsibilities as school citizens; and
- are free of the fear of harm, including potential threats from inside or outside the school.

Healthy human and social development is one of the primary goals of the British Columbia public school system. The public school system's responsibility for achieving this goal is shared with families and communities.

In circumstances where children and youth demonstrate patterns of behaviour that are aggressive and/or destructive to self or others, they and their families often require additional school and community supports and services.
