Guide Dogs & Service Dogs

Medical Form Guidelines

The following list provides guidelines with regard to conditions that may warrant the use of a guide or service dog for daily living, and the types of tasks that a guide or service dog may perform to assist a person. The list of tasks is not exhaustive.

To clarify, a guide or service dog is NOT:

- A therapy dog that the dog owner takes on visits to people in institutions or in their homes providing others with an opportunity to interact with a dog.
- An emotional support dog that provides comfort and companionship to the dog owner only.

In neither case does the dog owner require a dog to assist him/her with day-to-day activities and to be present in all or most situations in order to lead as full and independent a life as possible.

It should be noted that, although a guide or service dog can assist a disabled person with independent living, having a guide or service dog will also place a burden on the patient. Caring for a guide or service dog can also have a detrimental impact both on the health and wellbeing of the patient and/or the guide or service dog.

1. Visual impairment (legally blind) requiring a guide dog:

- A guide dog essentially becomes the eyes for the visually impaired person and, therefore, performs myriad tasks. Some tasks are very complex and specialized, such as navigating a busy city sidewalk, crossing streets only when safe to do so, helping guide a person up stairs, opening doors, finding objects.

2. Hearing impairment to such a degree that the person requires a service dog to do similar tasks to those listed*:

- Alert handler to name being called
- Alert handler to phone ringing
- Alert handler to oncoming cars
- Alert handler to any potential dangers
- Alert handler to the presence of others

3. Mobility issues to such a degree that the person requires a service dog to do similar tasks to those listed*:

- Retrieving dropped items
- Holding items
- Carrying items in a store or to another room
- Placing items on the counter at the cash register
- Opening/closing doors
- Fetching a cane, walker or other equipment

- Assisting handler to get up from a chair or the floor
- Turning lights on and off
- Assisting with the transfer from wheelchair to chair (as in restaurant)
- Reaching for items from a shelf or shopping cart
- Answering a (cell) phone when it rings
- Alerting others in the event of emergency
- Alerting handler to hazards such as steps, curbs, potholes or other obstacles
- Fetching medications if needed
- Assisting with stairs
- Assisting with ambulation
- Retrieving a purse, wallet, backpack or travel bag
- Carrying mail
- Carrying an item to another person
- Pulling or maneuvering a wheelchair

- Assisting with shopping cart or basket
- Pushing handicap or elevator buttons
- Safely maneuvering handler in a parking lot
- Assistance in a public restroom
- Putting away an item
- Emergency body pull

4. Conditions where a person would benefit from a service dog that can alert the person of an impending event (e.g. seizure disorders, diabetes, cardiac rhythm disturbances, etc). Medical alert service dogs can help a person better manage their condition and perform tasks* such as:

- Alerting handler to changes in medical condition, such as low blood sugar, impending seizures or cardiac rhythm disturbances
- Fetch medication if needed
- Fetch the phone so handler can call for help
- Alerting others to the need for assistance
- Reassuring handler during medical crisis
- Watch over handler until help arrives
- Assist handler in sitting or laying down in cases of impending medical crisis
- Assist handler in getting up from floor or chair after medical crisis

5. Psychological conditions where the person, although well enough to care for a service dog, requires a service dog to assist them with daily living and managing their condition (e.g. Post Traumatic Stress Disorder). A service dog may do similar tasks to those listed*:

- Tactile stimulation; orienting handler to here and now
- Assist with locating keys or telephone
- Fetch medication if needed
- Brace or lean against handler
- Assist handler to leave a social situation, as with panic attacks
- Facilitate social interactions
- Alert handler to the presence of other people
- Assist handler in creating a safe personal space
- Assist handler in safely crossing street
- Assist handler in safely maneuvering across parking lot
- Alert handler to changes in mood or mental status
- Buffer handler in crowded places

6. Autism in children where, under the supervision of a parent or guardian, a service dog can assist by:

- Calming child when agitated
- Preventing the child from self harming
- Preventing the child from bolting
- Facilitating social interactions for the child
