

What to Do When Someone Dies

After someone dies, the people left behind are faced with a wide range of tasks to close the affairs of the deceased. Addressing these tasks is also required to access the assets of the deceased, receive financial and non-financial assistance, cancel payments and reduce the risk of identify fraud. This document will help you understand who you need to notify, what documentation you need, and what services and benefits may be available to you.

Note: Not all the services and agencies will apply to every situation. Review each step carefully to determine whether it applies.
