Balancing the budget by 2013/14

After years of balanced budgets in good times, B.C. was caught in the global economic downturn of 2008. Like other governments around the world, we made the choice to run a deficit in order to protect priority programs like health care, education and social services. British Columbians expect us to return to balanced budgets as quickly as we responsibly can.

Despite the economic challenges, we know we also need to continue to look at every possible means to help make life more affordable for B.C. families. That means keeping taxes low and creating new opportunities through the B.C. Jobs Plan.

How do you submit your ideas?

We want your ideas. The Select Standing Committee on Finance and Government Services will be holding public consultations around the province in September and October. You can provide your feedback by:

- Participating at one of the public consultations.
- Completing an online survey
- Sending a written response by letter or email

Budget Consultations 2013
Challenging times for government revenues

In 2012/13 we will lose more than $240-million in natural gas royalty revenues from Budget 2012 because of falling natural gas prices and reduced production. Natural gas prices are expected to remain relatively low for several years, underlining the need to open up new markets and develop our liquefied natural gas export potential.

Even with declining natural gas royalty revenues, we are committed to delivering balanced budgets in 2013/14, while still delivering the services B.C. families expect.

Focus on keeping taxes low and government spending under control

Government continues to make controlling spending a priority. With the recent reduction in natural gas royalties government intends to introduce measures to maintain our commitment to balanced budgets by 2013/14, including:

• A hiring freeze across the B.C. public service and a salary freeze for public sector excluded management employees.

• A review of the current bargaining mandate for union employees.

• Identifying measures to further reduce spending and increase revenues.

• Virtually all of B.C.’s public-sector collective agreements covered by the 2010 mandate are now settled for two years of net-zero. Public sector employers are currently in negotiations on new agreements. A one per cent increase in total compensation for all unionized public sector employees costs approximately $197 million.

Are there areas where government spends money that you think could be spent more effectively or reduced to keep life affordable for British Columbians?

Are there areas where government spends money that you think could be spent more effectively or reduced to keep life affordable for British Columbians?

Investing in Education

This year, our government’s funding to school districts is a record $4.7 billion, a 26 per cent increase since 2000/01 despite a drop in student enrolment of more than 60,000 students.

Our government is investing more than $1.9 billion to support post-secondary education this year. Tuition in B.C. is the fourth lowest in Canada and increases are capped at two per cent annually.

What are your priorities?

Government will need to adopt revenue and/or expense measures to manage the deterioration of lower natural gas royalty revenues and balance the budget by 2013/14. What opportunities do you think there are to address this fiscal challenge?

• Find further efficiencies in other areas of service delivery?

• Hold the line on public sector wage increases?

• Increase revenue through other measures?

• Make changes to government programs to reduce spending?

How do we create the jobs future generations will depend on?

Through Canada Starts Here: The BC Jobs Plan, we are focusing our efforts on:

• Working with employers and communities to enable job creation across B.C.

• Strengthening infrastructure to get our goods to market.

• Expanding markets for B.C. products and services, particularly in Asia.

Our corporate income tax rates are among the lowest in North America. British Columbia is well placed geographically to take advantage of economic growth and increasing wealth among the middle classes of the emerging economies in the Asia Pacific.

How can we maintain B.C. as a safe haven for investors?

By staying on course to balance our budget, we’ve sent a strong message to investors in Europe, Asia and North America that B.C. is open for business and a safe haven in an uncertain world.

Standard and Poor’s reconfirmed B.C.’s AAA credit rating in 2012.

What would you like to see your government do to create the conditions necessary for jobs and economic growth?

B.C. has diversified export markets

As part of the BC Jobs Plan, we have made a commitment to the development of a liquefied natural gas export industry – to help the sector grow, diversify, and establish access to new markets with the demand for B.C.’s natural gas. This will, in turn, support jobs and economic opportunities across the province, especially in the north.
