Government is carving a path toward long-term, sustainable economic growth by investing in our greatest resource—people.

The Budget 2017 Update represents a new vision for British Columbia. It takes the first steps toward making life more affordable and improving services for everyone in our province, while building a strong sustainable economy that works for all.
Making life more affordable, including:

Cutting Medical Services Plan (MSP) premiums in half for everyone
Saving individuals up to $450 per year and families up to $900 per year, beginning Jan. 1, 2018.

Affordable housing
Building 1,700 affordable rental units for low- to moderate-income families, and building and staffing 2,000 new modular housing units with a $632-million investment.

Eliminating bridge tolls
Saving commuters who take the Golden Ears or Port Mann bridges more than $1,500 a year, and commercial drivers averaging one crossing a day more than $4,500 a year.

Income and disability assistance rates
Increasing income and disability assistance by an additional $100 a month.

Investing in services British Columbians count on, including:

Fentanyl emergency
Taking immediate action to improve mental-health and addiction services, as well as helping police and the coroner’s service deal with the emergency with a $322-million investment.

K-12 education
Ensuring students have the supports they need to succeed, including hiring 3,500 more teachers and build the spaces that schools need with $681 million in increased funding over three years.

Child care
Supporting over 4,000 new child-care spaces and providing $330 million in early childhood development and child-care funding in 2017-18.

Healthy Kids program expansion
Helping low-income families with improved dental rates and expanding services to include hearing aids.

Home and residential care for seniors
Supporting seniors who want to stay at home with $189 million in new support.

Residential Tenancy Branch
Reducing wait times and helping renters and landlords better understand their responsibilities with a $7-million investment over three years.

Building a sustainable economy that creates good jobs, including:

Wildfires
Upgrading wildfire infrastructure, protecting communities from wildfire, and supporting community recovery with a $255-million investment.

Adult education
Restoring free tuition for Adult Basic Education and English Language Learning at post-secondary and K-12 levels, which began in August 2017.

Infrastructure spending
Investing $14.6 billion in taxpayer-supported capital spending over the next three years, focusing on transportation, health, post-secondary institutions, education and housing projects.

Helping small businesses
Phasing out provincial sales tax (PST) on electricity for business and cutting small-business corporate income-tax rates from 2.5% to 2%.

Innovative and equitable jobs
Creating an emerging economy task force, the fair wages commission, and appointing an innovation commissioner.

Carbon Tax and Climate Action Tax Credit
Ending carbon tax revenue neutrality, so carbon tax revenue can be used to support families and fund green initiatives that address carbon action commitments.
Our province is expected to be among the top performers in economic growth this year and next. But there are pressures on government’s fiscal plan. This includes costs to help communities affected by the unprecedented wildfires season, financial instability at the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, uncertainty from the softwood lumber and North American free trade agreements, the upcoming negotiation on the new compensation mandate for government, as well as possible interest rate increases from the Bank of Canada.

As we prepare for Budget 2018, we are committed to continuing to build a better British Columbia where no one is left behind. That means taking concrete steps to make life more affordable, to invest in the services that people rely on, and to build a strong, sustainable economy—and we want to hear from you. This consultation is your opportunity to submit your priorities for Budget 2018.
