MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR

I am pleased to present the 2015-2016 Annual Report of the Minister’s Advisory Council on Aboriginal Women (MACAW), which highlights achievements that took place between April 1, 2015, and March 31, 2016.

Among many accomplishments, I would like to draw attention to two important developments in MACAW's work. First, B.C. and Aboriginal leadership partners planned and hosted a gathering for families of missing and murdered Aboriginal women and girls so that they may heal together by sharing their stories and strength. The 2016 Provincial Family Gathering occurred from January 31 – February 2, 2016, in Lheidli T’enneh territory (Prince George). We are proud to have been a part of this historic event.

Second, we are thrilled to report that this year’s Giving Voice projects have been a success. This initiative supports communities to bring Aboriginal women and girls together and “give voice” to issues of violence within their lives, families and communities. These community-led projects were designed to bring participants together in a safe and supportive way. There are so many powerful stories of resilience and strength!

Early in the 2016 calendar year, Minister Rustad made four new appointments to MACAW: Karen Joseph, Sarah Robinson, Linda Thomas and Coreen Child. I would like to thank all of the women on the Council who are committed to improving the quality of life for Aboriginal women in B.C. I’d especially like to express my gratitude to Mary Teegee, Vice-Chair, Annita McPhee, Darlene Shackelly and Debbie Williams who served the Council with great leadership during the 2015 calendar year.

I’d also like to acknowledge the many other women, Aboriginal organizations and communities who are working to achieve safe and healthy communities. We know by working in partnership, we will make a difference for all of our women.

Chastity Davis
Chair
BACKGROUND

In June 2011, the Ministry of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation (MARR) and the Native Women’s Association of Canada (NWAC) co-hosted the Collaboration to End Violence: National Aboriginal Women’s Forum in Vancouver. It brought together 250 participants from all over Canada, including government agencies, national Aboriginal organizations, First Nation, Métis and Inuit communities, and community-based organizations.

Following the Forum, the Honourable Mary Polak, Minister of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation at the time, announced the establishment of the Minister’s Advisory Council on Aboriginal Women (MACAW).

Mandate

MACAW provides advice to government on how to improve the quality of life for Aboriginal women in British Columbia.

Vision

A world where all Aboriginal peoples live free of violence and are healthy, sustainable and self-determining.

Mission

To improve the quality of life for Aboriginal women.

Philosophy

MACAW honours Aboriginal worldviews and works from a holistic perspective of women; thus, when we speak of women, we consider this to be inclusive of, but not limited to, children, family, community, nation, wellness, justice, land and water.

Duties

- Advocate for the well-being of Aboriginal women in British Columbia
- Provide advice and support to the Minister of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation
- Provide guidance and direction that is rooted in Aboriginal worldviews
- Strategically influence decision-making that will improve the quality of life for Aboriginal women in British Columbia.
MEMBERS

MACAW is comprised of 10 accomplished and respected Aboriginal women from across B.C. There is one Chair, one Vice-Chair and eight members, including an Elder Representative and a Youth Representative. Council members are appointed by the Minister of Aboriginal Relations and Reconciliation, and are selected based on criteria of diversity, experience and regional representation.

KEY ACCOMPLISHMENTS

>>> Direction to Government on Taking Action to End Violence and Improve the Lives of Aboriginal Women in B.C.

On September 16, 2013, MACAW submitted a directive to Minister Rustad titled Direction to Government on Taking Action to End Violence and Improve the Lives of Aboriginal Women in B.C. Taking Action is MACAW’s guiding report to government on the actions it must take to fulfill MACAW’s vision of “a world where all Aboriginal peoples live free of violence and are healthy, sustainable, and self-determining.”

Taking Action identified eight strategic directions, along with 27 actions, that address systemic or administrative changes required, or that address a stage of violence. Some actions have already been completed, such as signing an Aboriginal-Government Leadership Memorandum of Understanding, establishing a Joint Aboriginal-Government Partners’ Table on Stopping Violence Against Aboriginal Women, and establishing a Secretariat to support the activities of MACAW and the Joint Partners’ Table. Other activities are ongoing or must be implemented.

It has been three years since MACAW submitted Taking Action, and a more specific action plan must be jointly developed, implemented and measured over time. Strategic planning continues, in order to ensure the Province implements Taking Action’s recommended steps by working collaboratively with other agencies, Aboriginal leadership and communities.
Giving Voice

The Giving Voice initiative was developed to provide Aboriginal women, men, youth and Elders safe opportunities to “give voice” to issues of violence within their lives, families and communities. These community-led projects aim to stop violence against Aboriginal women and girls by changing behaviours and attitudes, and mobilizing communities.

In total, the Province provided $350,000 in funding to support two streams of community-led projects over 2014-2016. Twenty-five communities and organizations received funds to implement Giving Voice projects over one year (2014-2015), while twelve received funding to support mobilization and implementation projects over two years (2014-2016).

Communities told us that Giving Voice projects:

- Created opportunities to give voice to issues of violence and abuse
- Built empathy and connectedness amongst community members
- Created opportunities to engage in traditional activities for vulnerable people
- Created awareness about different types of violence
- Increased opportunities for vulnerable populations to participate in community programming
- Addressed the impacts stemming from violence
- Built a community partnership or collaboration
- Assisted the community to build capacity.
Many Giving Voice projects offered educational workshops or talking circles. Some projects exclusively served women or girls/teens. Others focused on men, such as the Aboriginal CATCH project in Kelowna, which hosted a monthly talking circle open to male participants in the Aboriginal Fathers Engagement Program. Families and other community members were often invited to participate and celebrate their accomplishments.

Many projects brought in guest speakers to address issues surrounding violence, such as prevention and safety plans, spiritual healing, personal wellbeing and self-care. Often projects featured interactive programming and cultural experiences. For example, the Penticton Indian Band, in addition to their bi-weekly program, organized two outings to gather birch bark and cedar root to make traditional birch bark baskets. These baskets were later used on a berry-picking trip to prepare for a community feast. Other cultural activities included traditional cleansings, and drum and regalia making. Many women and girls/teens developed healthy social relationships while connecting with one another through spiritual and cultural activities.

The success of Giving Voice speaks to the enduring need for community-driven, nation-based programs to address violence against Aboriginal women and girls.

>>> 2016 Provincial Family Gathering for Families of Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls

The Provincial Family Gathering for Families of Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls was held January 31-February 2, 2016, in Lheidli T’enneh territory (Prince George). The Provincial Family Gathering intended to create a supportive environment and help foster healing for families and communities who have lost loved ones.

The Provincial Family Gathering was emceed by Carla Robinson and Dr. Evan Adams and included renowned speakers such as Dr. Gabor Maté, Ernie Crey and Wanda Good. It offered facilitated sessions and cultural activities, and there was a private welcoming event for family members on the first day. Traditional healers and spiritual advisors offered guidance and healing throughout.

The first day opened with a prayer, cultural ceremonies and a Kwakwaka’wakw Mourning Ceremony and Blanketing. The afternoon session included Dr. Gabor Maté’s workshop, Trauma & Recovery – Meeting Our True Selves, as well as a Lheidli T’enneh Gathering of Rocks Welcome Ceremony. The evening banquet featured messages to the families, an honouring ceremony for advocates, and performances by the Butterflies in Spirit Dance Group, Kym Gouchie and Métis Fiddler Keith Hill.
The second day began with cultural ceremonies and songs, and moved into breakout sessions. There were facilitated sharing circles for youth, women and men that discussed the Highway of Tears and the Moose Hide Campaign. The event closed with final words shared by Lheidli T’enneh Chief Dominic Frederick and Minister John Rustad. Kim Gouchie and the Khast’an Drum Group offered closing songs.

The Provincial Family Gathering provided family members with the opportunity to share their experiences and support each other in their journey of healing. Their stories provided input into the Second National Roundtable and the design of the National Inquiry on Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls. Finally, family members were invited to participate in the formation of a quilt by creating cloth squares in memory of their loved ones. The quilt will be unveiled and displayed throughout the summer of 2016 in the B.C. Legislature to honour these Aboriginal women and girls.
>>> Fifth Justice Summit

On November 6-7, 2015, the Fifth Justice Summit was held at the UBC Allard School of Law. Two significant topics that were discussed are:

- A trauma-informed justice system response to victims of violent crime
- Better coordination and information sharing in and across family justice, criminal justice and child protection proceedings.

The Fifth Justice Summit Report of Proceedings sets out eight recommendations for a practical plan of action. Chastity Davis, Chair of MACAW, sits on the Steering Committee that is responsible for governance and planning. The next Justice Summit (June 10-11, 2016) will address mental health in the justice and public safety sector.

>>> 2015 Northern Transportation Symposium

On November 24, 2015, the Ministry of Transportation and Infrastructure and the First Nations Health Authority co-hosted the Northern Transportation Symposium in Smithers. It engaged First Nations leadership, community members and local government representatives to identify safe transportation options for communities along the Highway 16 corridor between Prince Rupert and Prince George. Dr. Lorna Williams, MACAW Member, attended the Symposium along with over 90 participants.

Participants discussed how best to connect communities along the 800 km Highway 16 corridor in practical, affordable, sustainable and safe ways. The First Nations Health Authority also surveyed Aboriginal communities along Highway 16 to identify their transportation needs.

The Symposium was an important step in identifying solutions that work for local communities. As Dr. Lorna Williams said, “people in the North are rallying to find solutions. Government is beginning to listen and willing to hear what people want to do. I hadn’t seen this kind of collaborative working relationship before.” The Summary of Proceedings identifies key themes of service expansion, capital and operating funds, collaboration and communication, and highway safety.
Aboriginal women, communities and organizations, including MACAW, are well aware of the safety and transportation challenges that Aboriginal women and girls face, especially when they live in remote locations.

Chastity Davis, Chair of MACAW, attended an official announcement on December 14, 2015, for the Five Point Action Plan for Safe Transportation Options Along Highway 16. The initial $3-million funding commitment will enhance transportation safety along the Highway 16 corridor from Prince Rupert to Prince George. At the announcement, Chastity stated:

“Today’s transportation action plan for the Highway 16 corridor outlines five steps that were informed by First Nation communities through consultation efforts by the Ministry of Transportation and Infrastructure, in partnership with the First Nations Health Authority. Our hope is that the five steps outlined today will directly benefit Aboriginal women and girls in the north by creating safe and accessible transportation systems, such as expanded transit and community-based transportation.”

The Five Point Action Plan enhances the $5.2 million annual investment the Province makes towards transit services in communities along the Highway 16 corridor. MACAW offers its support to the new Highway 16 Transportation Advisory Group that will oversee the implementation of the Five Point Action Plan and will analyze the input received at the 2015 Northern Transportation Symposium.
National Inquiry on Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls

The Pre-Inquiry Design process held 18 meetings across Canada, which nearly 2,000 individuals participated in. MACAW responded to discussion questions posed by the federal government by providing feedback to the Honourable Suzanne Anton, B.C. Minister of Justice and Attorney General. Dr. Lorna Williams, MACAW member, participated in a Pre-Inquiry Design meeting in Vancouver, while Barbara Ward-Burkitt, Vice-Chair, and Chastity Davis, Chair, participated in the Pre-Inquiry Design meeting in Prince George. Chastity also attended the Assembly of First Nations Pre-Inquiry Design meeting.

Ministers Bennett, Wilson-Raybould and Hadju concluded: “We are determined to do this right for the survivors, families and loved ones, to honour the spirits and memories of those we have lost, and to protect the future generations.”

Anti-Domestic Violence

MACAW continues its advisory role with the Provincial Office of Domestic Violence (PODV) to ensure that special consideration is given to the needs of Aboriginal women and girls. As part of B.C.’s three-year, $5.5 million Provincial Domestic Violence Plan, $2 million was allocated to develop and deliver programs specifically for Aboriginal women, men and children affected by domestic violence.

In February 2016, twenty-four Aboriginal organizations and communities received a combined total of $1.5 million through the Aboriginal Domestic Violence Funding Project to deliver culture-based programs that address domestic violence.

Chastity Davis, Chair of MACAW, stated:

“Our Council continues to collaborate with the Province to find ways to address the systematic issues and root causes that are the reasons that domestic violence occurs at alarmingly high rates to Aboriginal women and their children. This funding is a good start to address the issues that are specific to our communities’ unique needs to help men, women and children overcome abuse and live healthy, safe lives. Projects ranged from individual and family counselling services with a cultural focus to healing discussions for entire communities to increase awareness about domestic violence.”
Second National Roundtable on Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls

The Second National Roundtable on Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls was held February 24-26, 2016, in Winnipeg, Manitoba. Family members, Minister Suzanne Anton, Minister John Rustad, MACAW Chair Chastity Davis, BCAFN Regional Chief Shane Gottfriedson and senior officials comprised the B.C. Delegation.

The first day was open only to family members. The next two days offered sharing circles where families met with Indigenous leaders, provincial and territorial premiers, and federal and provincial ministers. They offered recommendations to achieve justice and end violence, and discussed the upcoming National Inquiry. A side meeting was held with B.C. family members to discuss the Province’s next steps to address missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls.

At the conclusion, an Ontario provincial government document was distributed, titled Outcomes and Priorities for Action to Prevent and Address Violence Against Indigenous Women and Girls. It sets out 20 priorities in three theme areas: prevention and awareness; community safety; and, culturally relevant policing measures and justice responses.
MACAW meetings provide the opportunity for members to share experiences, knowledge and understanding of Aboriginal women’s issues, and discuss and develop recommendations to government. MACAW meets with ministers, staff from provincial ministries, Aboriginal governments, community-based organizations, service providers and members of Indigenous communities.

2016-2017 GOALS

As part of its ongoing work with the Province, MACAW works respectfully and in partnership with Aboriginal women, organizations and leadership to improve Aboriginal women’s quality of life. To further this goal, MACAW will:

- Continue working with federal and provincial partners to support the National Inquiry on Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls.
- Build on the momentum created by the Joint Aboriginal-Government Partners Table and the 2016 Provincial Family Gathering. A Children and Family Gathering is expected to take place in early summer 2016.
- Continue its advisory role with the Provincial Office of Domestic Violence to ensure an Aboriginal perspective surrounds the development of culturally-responsive policies, programs and services that will support Indigenous peoples affected by domestic violence.
- Report back on the success of the Giving Voice initiative, which wraps up at the end of 2016, and continue to advocate for community-led, holistic programs and services that “give voice” to issues of violence.
- Complete strategic planning sessions to prioritize its goals and foster strong relationships with Aboriginal and provincial leadership.
