

A CREDIBLE CHAMPION shows courage and conviction in advocating for change for the betterment of Indigenous people. This means stepping forward, from a place of respect and knowledge, to name needed change and to champion it. This may mean challenging current business practices and attitudes. A credible champion is admired and respected by Indigenous people and BC Public Service employees, is deeply knowledgeable in the culture of those with whom s/he works, and demonstrates outstanding performance as identified by Indigenous people and the public service. A credible champion remains self-aware and maintains effective relationships.

BEFORE AND DURING THE INTERVIEW

- Review both “ready” and “not ready” behaviours. See the Indigenous Relations Behavioural Competency dictionary for the entire list. Select behaviours critical to success. The candidate may demonstrate other valid “ready” and/or “not ready” behaviours not listed.
- Avoid listening only for key words. Listen to the full story, depth, and quality of the example, and consider everything you hear, see, and notice during the interview.

AFTER THE INTERVIEW

- Did they demonstrate openness and curiosity when providing examples?
- Did the candidate show their understanding and competence at the required readiness level?
- If the candidate does not have direct experience working with Indigenous people, are the thinking, attitude, and behaviours demonstrated translatable to working effectively with Indigenous people? Imagine the candidate actually carrying out the duties of the position and interacting with (and/or supporting) Indigenous people, communities, governments and organizations. When you listen to what the candidate is telling you, does it give you confidence the candidate will work with the respect needed to be ready?
- Use the Interpretive Wheel to evaluate the response and assign a numerical score.

DID the candidate demonstrate...?
