In this first year of a three-year transition of Maple Leaf from the British Columbia curriculum, grade 10 students are now following the Maple Leaf World Curriculum while grade 11 and 12 students continue to complete the requirements of the BC graduation program.

The inspector verified through the review of planning materials and interviews with teachers that teachers of grade 11 and 12 courses are fully implementing the BC curriculum. This is facilitated by the support provided by the Maple Leaf system through which planning materials and lesson ideas for most courses are prepared by curriculum coordinators and shared with teachers through a system-wide SharePoint site. Planning templates include elements such as Big ideas, core competencies and curriculum competencies, First Peoples Principles of Learning and student assessment. Teachers talked about student reflection, self-assessment and student ownership of their learning as being important elements of learning. Over the past year, the School has focused on enhancing its understanding of First Peoples Principles of Learning and integrating those principles in the classroom. The inspector was pleased to see evidence of growth this year through hearing several examples of how the principles have been integrated in the classroom and connected to Chinese culture.

The School offers four programs for new students ranging from a Foundations program, in which students focus on building English language ability, to direct placement in the full grade 10 program.

Summer school is offered to new students prior to enrolment in grade 10.

The system employs several strategies aimed at enhancing students’ English language proficiency including instructional strategies, silent reading time during homeroom, individual support to at-risk students and professional development in ESL teaching strategies. The School has introduced ReadTheory, an online reading program that enables the School to assess students’ reading ability and identify appropriately leveled reading materials.
