SINGLE-USE & PLASTIC WASTE PREVENTION REGULATION

gov.bc.ca/reuse

What counts as a food service accessory?

Single-use items often given to customers with prepared food and drinks.

What you need to know

As of December 20, 2023, B.C. food service providers can no longer offer single-use (disposable) plastic utensils.

Food services providers can give out other disposable items only on request and at self-serve stations.

What you need to do

1. Stop using plastic utensils

Don't provide customers with single-use plastic knives, forks, spoons, chopsticks, stir sticks or splash plugs – including those made partly of plastic and those made with compostable, biodegradable or oxo-degradable plastic.

2. Stop offering packets of single-use items

Don't provide customers with bundled disposables, such as a fork and knife or chopsticks packaged together with a napkin.

3. Only provide other single-use accessories on request

Don't automatically give out disposables. These items are only to be provided when a customer asks for them, takes them from a self-serve station, or accepts them when offered by staff or through an online order form.

4. Keep records

If you operate an online food-delivery platform and take orders for more than one food service provider, you need to keep a record of the percentage of deliveries that request or accept food service accessories. Records must be kept for two calendar years.

What single-use accessories can be provided on request?

Wooden utensils

Condiments

Drink cup lids and sleeves

Napkins and wet wipes

Straws

Garnishes
(e.g., plastic sushi grass, drink umbrellas)

These items are exempt in some situations under the regulation.

EXEMPTIONS

Lids for drinks purchased at a drive-through window or for delivery or pick-up

Single-use accessories (individual or bundled) for use in care and correctional facilities
