Is your will registered?

- Did you know the location of all wills in British Columbia may be registered with the Vital Statistics Agency? The Wills Registry contains only the location of the will, not the actual document.
- A will is an important personal document. The original copy of your will should be kept in a secure location. Where you keep it is up to you.

Why register your will?

- Making a will and registering its location ensures that your wishes with regard to your estate and the care of your children are honoured.

Why update your will?

- An updated will recognizes changes in your family composition such as the birth of a new child and the person(s) you desire to care for them in case of your death.

How do I search for the location of a will?

- Following the death of an individual, the estate administrator/executor/executrix or next of kin may initiate a request for search of a wills notice with the Vital Statistics Agency using the appropriate form.

Instructions

- Complete the form on the reverse side of this pamphlet.
- Be sure to complete the information contained in the red box area which describes the person for whom the will was made.

- If you are registering the location of a will for the first time choose (a); if you are recording a new location for your will choose (c). Choose (b) only if you are revoking a will and not registering a new one. Executing a new will automatically revokes the previous one.
- Be sure to sign the bottom of the form and include a cheque or money order payable to the Minister of Finance. The current fee is $17.00.
