WEEKLY INCIDENT REPORT Jan 22 – 28, 2018

DANGEROUS GOODS

On 22 Jan, 2018, CANUTEC reported a collision between a Canadian Pacific Railway locomotive and a fuel truck at the CP Rail yard in Port Coquitlam. This resulted in a rupture of the fuel truck tanks that were carrying ethanol and it caused an intense fire. A tactical evacuation was conducted within a 1 km radius of the site as a precaution until the fire could be controlled. The Ministry of Environment Response Officer (MOE RO) raised the incident to Code 2 (urgent status).

On 24 Jan, 2018, a tanker truck carrying 40,000 Litres of fuel rolled over on Highway 3, five kilometres east of Grand Forks. None of the loaded fuel being transported leaked however there was a small spill from the saddle tanks. The MOE RO raised this incident to Code 2 (urgent status) the following day when the tanker was due to be off loaded.

TSUNAMI

On 23 Jan 2018, at 01:38 PST the National Tsunami Warning Centre (NTWC) reported an earthquake initial magnitude 8.0 that was later revised to 8.2 and then finalized as 7.9, off the coast of Kodiak City, Alaska. The NTWC issued a tsunami warning for British Columbia, the Juan de Fuca coast, the outer west coast of Vancouver Island, the central coast and northeast Vancouver Island, and the north coast and Haida Gwaii. Subsequently, the Provincial Emergency Notification System (PENS) was activated and a tsunami warning notification was issued to key agencies, the media and coastal areas in Tsunami Zones A, B, C, and D along the BC coast. There was no warning or advisory issued for the areas along the inner coast areas of Tsunami Zone E. The PECC and PREOCs were activated along with several coastal community EOCs and evacuations were carried out according to local plans. The confirmed maximum wave heights did not exceed 21 cm at Old Harbor, Alaska and 12 cm at Langara, Haida Gwaii. At 04:13 PST, the tsunami warning was cancelled for coastal BC.

FLOODING

On 22 Jan 2018, the Comox Valley Regional District was issued a task number due to flooding in the Lewis Road area of Campbell River. The residents affected were provided 72 hours of ESS assistance.

On 26 Jan 2018, the Central Coast Regional District was issued a task number for flood monitoring within their district.

On 28 Jan 2018, the Nanaimo Regional District was issued a task number for a flood event on Englishman River as a result of heavy rainfall from the Atmospheric River affecting Vancouver Island and the South Coast.
